25-Year Veteran Lynda Ward Joins Jones Lang LaSalle as Vice President

Senior Business and Workplace Strategy Professional Part of Jones Lang LaSalle's Strategic Consulting Team

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 21, 2008 – Jones Lang LaSalle announced that Lynda Ward, a 25-year veteran and industry leader in workplace strategy, joined the firm's fast-growing Strategic Consulting team as Vice President. In her new position, Ms. Ward will assist clients throughout the Bay area in improving workplace efficiencies and effectiveness.

“Lynda is well respected in the industry as a leader in the workplace solutions field,” said Debra Moritz, Managing Director of Jones Lang LaSalle's Strategic Consulting Group. “She has been acknowledged for her inspirational direction, entrepreneurial innovations and results-oriented leadership. We're thrilled to have her aboard.”

Prior to her new position, Ms. Ward was a Senior Principal at Sun Microsystems in the Sun Open Work Practice, where she engaged with Fortune 500 companies to align business goals with real estate, technology and organizational strategies to reduce costs and increase revenue. Her strong background also includes holding leadership positions at RMW architecture & interiors, DEGW Architects and Consultants and Oneworkplace. Representative clients include McKesson Corporation CRE, Hewlett Packard, Industrial Light and Magic, Charles Schwab, Northrup Grumman, KLA-Tencor, HUD.

Ms. Ward earned her Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Florida and currently serves as the Recognition and Award Chair for Global CoreNet Workplace Community Group.

Jones Lang LaSalle's Strategic Consulting Group is dedicated to the analysis, research and long-run implementation of strategic real estate solutions. The team helps clients reduce risk, maximize returns and make quality property decisions while developing a framework that positions real estate to accommodate changes in business needs, assists in location selection and creates efficiency.
