PALO ALTO, CA – September 22, 2009 — Jones Lang LaSalle, the leading financial and professional services firm specializing in real estate, has appointed Samit Chopra as a Managing Director with the firm's International Desk. The International Desk connects clients with transaction specialists across the globe, continuing the firm's tradition as a world leader in delivering globally integrated real estate services.

Based in Palo Alto, California, Chopra is responsible for expanding the firm's international business across the firm's three regions—Americas; Europe, Middle East, Africa; and Asia Pacific. Chopra joins an established team of distinguished international real estate specialists who are committed to thinking and acting globally.

"Samit's commitment to excellence and renowned leadership is a major asset to our team as we continue the firm's tradition of helping clients capitalize on opportunities in the global marketplace," said Vincent Lottefier, the head of Jones Lang LaSalle's International Desk.

A Belgian national, Lottefier's 20+ years of real estate experience spans six countries over three world regions. "As companies continue to globalize, they face the challenge of connecting with the right players at the right time. Seamless service delivery on a global landscape is what Jones Lang LaSalle does best, and we've done it consistently."

Chopra, an Indian national, has more than 13 years of experience in providing strategic real estate advice to multinational corporations in India and the United States. Most recently, he led corporate client development and account management functions for Jones Lang LaSalle in India. Prior to that, Chopra managed the transaction business for Jones Lang LaSalle's Western Region (Mumbai and Pune) in India.

Prior to returning to India in 2006, Chopra worked as a Vice President at Jones Lang LaSalle's New York office. While in New York, Chopra was primarily involved in devising and implementing occupancy strategies for the firm's corporate occupier clients.
