Jones Lang LaSalle Names Jason Volpe as Senior Vice President in San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, March 23, 2010 — Jones Lang LaSalle announced today that it has added to its tenant representation team in San Francisco with the hiring of Jason Volpe as Senior Vice President.

Prior to joining Jones Lang LaSalle, Volpe was with Studley in Chicago and San Francisco where he participated in more than 75 major transactions totalling 3.5 million square feet. He specializes in strategic real estate acquisition, disposition and lease consulting for major corporate and government clients.

“Jason’s expertise and talent deepens our client service bench in San Francisco,” said Elizabeth Hearle, Northwest Market Director, Jones Lang LaSalle. “He will be a valuable asset to our clients looking for answers to complex real estate issues. His expertise will be especially helpful as corporations search for ways to re-balance their real estate portfolio strategies coming out of the recent downturn and in preparation for future corporate expansion.”

Before joining Studley, Volpe was an attorney practicing commercial real estate litigation at Bollinger, Ruberry & Garvey in Chicago where he participated in more than 200 lawsuits involving real estate development and transactions.

Volpe holds a B.A. in philosophy with a minor in business from the University of Texas. He received his J.D from the University of Texas and is a member of the American Bar Association licensed to practice law in Illinois.

Jones Lang LaSalle’s Northern California operation has major offices in San Francisco, Palo Alto, Walnut Creek and Sacramento and more than 800 employees in the region offering a broad range of real estate expertise including agency leasing, tenant representation, brokerage, capital markets advisory, project development, property and facilities management, sustainability and energy services and real estate consulting.
